THE INDIANA STRUGGLE

Republicans Win the First Bout in the Struggle.

Election of U. S. Senator to be Had Next Week.

Cullom Explains the Inter-State Commerce Bill.

The Indiana Imbroglio.

INDIANAPOLIS January 10 The hallways and corridors of the capitol were thronged by an immense crowd of people this morning anxious to witness possible developments in the political struggle now in progress. All interest centered in the house, where the galleries were densely packed, while prominent politicians were present and located at available points for giving advice and assistance to their friends on the floor. Directly after prayer the doorkeeper stepped to the front of the speaker's chair and announced the presence of the senate. The senate consisted of nineteen republican members of that body. Kellison (democrat) arose and called "Mr. Speaker," but was not recognized, Speaker Sayre immediately announced that the business of the convention was to canvass the vote for lieutenant governor. Other democratic members also claimed the speaker's attention, but all were refused recognition. The reading of the returns consumed half an hour, and at its close while the clerk was making his computations, Jewett (democrat) addressed the speaker, but was told nothing would be in order until the canvass was completed. When the canvass was completed, Robertson was declared elected by a majority of 3,523. He was declared elected and was sworn in by a justice of the superior court. Robertson at once took the gavel, and proceeded to read his address. The democrats attempted to be heard, and Jewett (democrat), exclaimed. "Mr. Speaker, we do not recognize the legality of this joint convention (pointing to republican senators) when there is no representation of the senate except the fag end of that body. We protest against this usurpation of power, this disorganization and overturning of precedent and law." At the conclusion of Robertson's address he declared the joint convention adjourned, to reassemble in the same hall on Wednesday, the 19th, to vote for United States senator. Speaker Sayre then took possession of the gavel, and, on motion of Gardner, the house adjourned.

When the house reassembled Jewett, democrat, offered resolutions reciting the facts of the election for lieutenant governor, canvassing the vote, etc., admitting all points except the one as to whether there was a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor, and inviting Mr Robertson to seek a solution through the courts Debate on these resolutions occupied a large part of the afternoon, and they were finally rejected, republican speakers maintaining that the general assembly was the only tribunal competent to settle the matter. The only additional feature of interest in the afternoon proceedings was the filing notices of contest in the cases of Englehart vs. Mackay, Downing againg Beasly, and Dickerson vs. Meagher. These were referred to the committee on elections. The first of these contests is that of a democrat against a republican, the others are republicans against democrats.

There have been but few developments to night, both sides carefully keeping their own counsel, and it is difficult to ascertain what is anticipated for to-morrow. The senate will assemble at 10 o'clock, and it is understood to-night, though it cannot be stated as an ascertained fact, that Mr. Robertson will be refused admittance to the chamber. Another rumor is that no opposition will be offered in case he appears on the floor of the senate, but that any attempt on his part to take his seat as presiding officer of the body will be resisted. It is said that Mr. Robertson does not anticipate resorting to force; that he considers his legal status as lieutenant governor fully established by to-day's proceedings, and will quietly await the solution of the problem.

XLIX Congress.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, January 10. The senate at 1 o'clock took up the inter-state commerce bill and Mr. Beck took the floor with a speech in favor of the conference report.

At 2 o'clock, Beck having concluded his remarks on the inter-state bill, Cullom took the floor. He said he would confine attention at this time to an explanation of the fourth section (long and short hauls), in respect to which there seemed so much misunderstanding.

This section, he said, simply undertakes to lay down in specific terms the rule or principle, which, as I have always contended, is already in effect contained in other provisions of the bill. The first requirement of the bill on the subject of rates is found in the first section. It is that all rates shall be reasonable and just. This is in effect the declaration that under similar circumstances and conditions a greater sum shall not be charged for shorter than for longer distances, because under such circumstances it would not be reasonable and just to make such charges. The next requirement of the bill that affects the question is found in the first part of the third section, which forbids giving an undue or unreasonable preference of advantage to any particular locality. This is likewise a declaration that a greater sum shall not be charged for a shorter than for a longer haul, under similar circumstances and conditions, because such charges would be making or giving of an "undue or unreasonable preference or advantage" to one particular locality, or would subject some other particular locality to an "undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage.' The senator quoted the fourth section in full. As I understand it, this section as it now stands simply prohibits railroad corporations from charging a greater aggregate sum, not a higher rate, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line, in the same direction and under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, when the shorter is included within the longer distance. There is no other prohibition made in positive terms. The declaration that this shall not be construed as authorizing any common carrier within the terms of this act to charge and receive as great compensation for a shorter as for a longer distance does not in terms prohibit charging as much for a shorter as for a longer distance, but simply withholds legislative sanction from the making of such charge. This qualifying clause negatives inferences that might possibly be drawn from the language of the section without those words: namely, that an equal charge for a shorter distance is authorized by inference because only a greater charge is prohibited The qualification therefore, leaves the question whether an equal amount can be charged for a shorter distance to be determined by the provisions of the bill to which I have already referred, requiring all charges to be reasonable, and forbidding the giving of an unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular locality. The requirement of the fourth section then is that between shipments of the same kind in the same direction, over the same line and made under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, a greater sum shall not be charged for a shorter than for a longer haul, when the shorter comprises part of the longer haul; not that a higher rate shall not be charged per mile but that a greater aggregate sum shall not be charged. The limitations placed upon the prohibition that is made are very significant, and they must not be overlooked. They require that in determining sums that may be charged for shorter as compared with longer distances, requirement must be made: First, between shipments of like kind of property; second, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions; third, over the same lines; fourth, in the same direction; fifth, when the shorter is included within the longer distance When the act is to be applied in any given case to measure the charge that may be made for any distance, as compared with a longer distance, all the limitations must be taken into account and they must all apply to the case, not three or four of them, but all of them. The first, fourth and fifth limitations do not appear to call for any explanation, but the second and third may need some explanation. As I understand them, the words "circumstances and conditions" mean conditions that govern railway traffic and circumstances under which it is transported. To my mind these words are full of meaning. They comprehend all circumstances and conditions that may justify differences in rates, such as competition with other roads and water routes, volume and character of business at different points, difference in terminal expenses and cost of service in each case. If the words used were "same circumstances and conditions," ingenious railway gentlemen could be able to show that circumstances and conditions were never exactly the same in any two cases, and they might also be able to show that they were not "similar" if that was the word used, but the words "substantially similar" impart enough latitude to comparison to enable courts to exercise sound discretion and common sense in passing upon cases that may arise so far as any one railroad company is concerned. Therefore the sum which it may charge for a haul from one end of its road to the other end becomes the maximum amount it can charge for any shorter haul over that road in the same direction and under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, when the shorter distance is included within the longer. But the question that seems to trouble those who object to the section as it stands is whether the maximum thus fixed is the amount which the railroad company charges upon shipments originating and destined to points on its own line, or whether the maximum is the sum which it accepts as its share of the through rate upon shipments passing over its road which originate at, or are destined to points upon another road. It seems clear to me there can be but one answer to that question. In the first place the measure of the charge that may be made for the shorter distance, is the sum that is charged for longer distances over the same line and under substantially similar circumstances and conditions. Rates fixed by a railroad company between points upon its own road are clearly rates upon one line, or, in the terms of the bill, 'the same line.' A railroad company can make and control rates upon its own road, and the section says that in making such rates the short haul principle shall be observed. A railroad company cannot control rates over the roads of another company, but when two or more companies unite in making joint rates over their respective roads, they become in the eye of this bill one line, and this section says that the short haul principle must be observed in making rates over that line, the two or more roads composing it being within the meaning of the section same line so far as joint rates are concerned. The word railroad is used throughout the bill and the word line is used only in this section. Courts will be bound to assume that the word line means something different from the word railroad or it would not have been used in this one instance when the word railroad would naturally have been used if something different had not been intended The word line means a railroad or combination of railroads. It means a route. Section 7 of the bill requires carriage of freight to be "treated as one continuous carriage from the place of shipment to the place destination," and this could not be done in the case of shipments over connecting roads. If the word used in this section was railroad, instead of line, joint through rates which are made by two or more railroad companies between points upon their respective roads are made over an entirely different and distinct line from that over which any one company individually makes rate, and they are also made under different "circumstances and conditions" from those which govern and determine rates made over a single railroad. The two transactions are separate and distinct, neither being necessarily governed by the other. Furthermore, the making of joint through rates is specially recognized by the bill in the section requiring publicity of rates, and nowhere in the bill can anything be found in relation to division of the joint rate by connecting roads. I am satisfied, therefore, that the only construction that is warranted by the language of this section is the one that I have given it, and that, instead of requiring rates to be measured by the percentage of the through rate which the road accepts, or of requiring through rates over connecting roads to be an aggregation of local rates over each road, as some have claimed, the section as it stands simply requires that each railroad company shall observe the short haul principle as to its own rates, and that the same principle shall also be observed by combinations of railroads as to joint through rates between points upon their roads agreed upon by such combinations.

Mr George objected to interpretation put upon words "under like circumstances and conditions" by Mr. Cullom He did not believe that it was the true and legitimate interpretation

In reply to questions by Mr Aldrich, Mr. Harris of Tennessee undertook to explain and defend the fourth section of the bill. There was, he said, four distinct and independent lines of railroad between San Francisco and New York. The charges were made by a contract and agreement between them. If they charged $100 a car from San Francisco to New York that was the maximum rate which they could charge from Ogden or Omaha to New York.

Mr. Aldrich—"Then they could charge $99 a car from Ogden, or Omaha to Buffalo"

Mr. Harris—"There is no reason to be found in this bill why they may not charge from any intermediate point, up to the maximum of through charges, except that the charges must be reasonable."

Mr. Stanford argued against the bill. He that it tended not only to prevent competition by railroads but it exhibited a tendency to foster water ways to the prejudice of railroad interests. If the object were to enhance water lines at the expense of railroads, he did not know how a bill could be framed to secure such an object better than the pending bill. The railroad business was legitimate. There could be no justification in depriving the owners of railroads of the control of their property. The bill seemed to him clearly in violation of the rights of property and of the rights of labor to receive compensation for services performed. It was also a discouragement to that class of investment. In regard to the long and short haul section, he argued that water and other competition sometimes made it necessary to charge more for intermediate business than for through business. All overland lines of railroad find their rates very largely controlled and influenced by routes by way of the Isthmus of Panama and of Cape Horn. Meeting that competition and being willing to accept a small profit where a larger cannot be had, they carry along the line between two extreme points the same character of freight at less rates than it is carried from east to west or west to east to intermediate places. Thus because of competition freight going from New York to San Francisco may pass over various lines of railroad making up a through line for perhaps their regular rates, say from New York to Buffalo, from Buffalo to Chicago, from Chicago to Omaha, from Omaha to Salt Lake, and so on to its destination on the Pacific coast. No profit is so small as to be despised. Business is done at that rate, rather than not do it at all. Take a more marked illustration: The Southern Pacific road strikes the Atlantic waters at a much less distance than any of its more northern competitors. It has a line of easy gradients, comparatively, and it competes not only with its northern rivals, but more particularly with the Cape Horn and Isthmus of Panama routes, because of its shorter line and easy gradients. In this competition it often takes freight between the two oceans as low as one dollar, while it takes freight half way, for, say ten dollars a ton, a most reasonable rate for the limited local business of that country. Now, if it only makes a dollar net on a freight from San Francisco to New Orleans at $10, it is led to make that dollar when it can get no more; but a ton of freight going to El Paso, something over half the distance, will pay $50 a ton. Now, if freight at $10 to New Orleans, pays one dollar profit, freight going the less distance to El Paso, would pay as much profit as twenty-one tons going through to New Orleans, and the rates charged to El Paso are but fair, as shown by the gross earnings and gross expenses of the road, leaving but a very narrow net profit. The shorter distance is not charged any more because of the less rate for the longer distance. Indeed the longer distance helps the railroad company to maintain itself, while without that help perhaps they could not do shorter business at all. Is this congress prepared to say that small earnings shall be despised, that they shall not be secured when the greater cannot be had? Are they prepared to deny individual shippers and communities the benefit of their more favorable location, whether made so because of the geography and topography of the country or by artificial means.

John Roach Dead.

NEW YORK, January 10. The family remained with Roach until one this morning. Dr. Taylor at five this morning detected the approach of death and at once informed the family that Roach had only a few hours to live The dying man sank slowly. He lost consciousness about 7.30. His end was unmarked by a struggle. The date of the funeral has not been decided upon. It will take place from St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church. Roach was a member of the church. The interment will be in the family plot at Greenwood cemetery. The cancerous growth had eaten its way into the side of the neck, below the angle of the jaw, involving the large arteries which became liable to rupture at any moment. Roach was in great pain all day yesterday and to give him relief large doses of morphine were injected, and he was unconscious most of the time. In a few conscious moments he has he spoke to his son Garrett, who was with him all the time. The young man remained with his father during the night. He occupied a seat at the bedside and helped the nurses, who applied soothing syrups and renewed injections of morphine every time the patient awakened. Only a few intimate friends of the family were admitted to the house yesterday, but nobody other than nurses and physicians were allowed to see Roach. The deceased leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter, all grown.

A Spanish Sensation.

MADRID, January 10.—For several hours, on Saturday, the city was excited over sensational reports that Infanta Isabella, sister of the late King Alfonso, had been kidnapped or killed. The Infanta had gone out in a carriage to follow the royal huntsmen in Prado. She occupied her carriage alone and was escorted by three aides. In a remote part of the great park the carriage broke down, throwing the Infanta to the ditch. She was not hurt, although it was feared she was. It was deemed prudent for her to remain at the scene of the accident until assistance could be procured, and for this a lackey was dispatched. Much time was lost in all this. In the meantime the huntsmen had gone on a great distance before they missed their royal mistress, and when they discovered she was no longer with them, they became greatly frightened, started a general alarm and began a noisy search. The prolonged absence of the Infanta from the castle caused uneasiness there, and finally police and troops were sent in search of her.

The Denver papers might win some glory by publishing a list of the employes of the legislature. About twenty-five would be a reasonable number. Two hundred and four was the number in the last legislature.

The Santa Fe and Northern railroad, which was opened a few days ago, gives a direct route by the Denver and Rio Grande railroad to Santa Fe. This is likely to cause a larger interchange of trade that will be an advantage to both New Mexico and Colorado. It will be a great convenience to those who wish to visit New Mexico, as it will not only shorten the distance and time, but will also do away with the tedious waiting at La Junta

The senatorial contest in Illinois promises as much excitement as that two years ago. No candidate will have a majority but Farwell will lead. Owing to his leadership of the Blaine forces in 1880, he has the hearty sympathy of most of the Blaine men This ought to be equivalent to an election. But all the candidates have local support and this must divide the Blaine force. But these men are likely to favor Farwell as a second choice.

The senatorial contest in New York is growing very exciting. The adherents of the two leading candidates, Miller and Morton, show how much the two old factions are broken up. Me-too Platt seems to be the manager for Morton and ex Collector Robertson for Miller. It has been charged that Blaine has interfered and is trying to elect Morton This seems hardly probable, considering the kind of support each candidate is getting.

The republicans seem to have won the first heat in the Indiana senatorial contest. The democrats hoped to prevent an organization of the joint convention to count the votes. All the democratic senators staid out. But the plan is so revolutionary that it cannot succeed. The democrats found that there would be a republican majority of one. So they strive to prevent an organization of the legislature that can elect a United States republican senator. When the legislature adjourns the governor can then appoint a senator. The plan is absurd and the democratic party will hurt itself all over the country unless this revolutionary conduct is denounced

There is a chance for some member of the legislature to distinguish himself by presenting a bill requiring the treasurer of the state to put all the surplus funds of the state at interest. The bill can easily be drawn from the New York bill. The money is let by bids to responsible parties and good security is given. There have been many cases in which a state has lost money that was on deposit as ours is. But we have yet to hear of a case in which money has been lost where loaned under the provisions of the New York state law. When loaned in this way greater care is taken in obtaining security. If this is done the office of state treasurer will no longer be so anxiously sought after by politicians.

Scribner & Welford have just published a selection from the correspondence of Abraham Hayward who perhaps was intimate with a larger number of prominent statesmen and literary men of the last forty years than any other man of his day. The following letter from this book has been quoted in the New York Tribune. Thackeray was proposed as a member of the Athenæum club by Arthur Hallam and Dean Milman He was blackballed, but the committee made ample amends a year later by electing him Hayward wrote Thackeray a letter of sympathy when the latter was blackballed, and to this received the following very characteristic reply

KENSINGTON, February 1, 1850

MY DEAR HAYWARD Thank you for your kind note. I was quite prepared for the issue of the kind effort made at the Athenæum in my behalf, indeed, as a satirical writer, I rather wonder that I have not made more enemies than I have. I don't mean enemies in a bad sense, but men conscientiously opposed to my style, art, opinions, impertinences, and so forth There must be thousands of men to whom the practice of ridicule must be very offensive, doesn't one see such in society or in one's own family persons whose nature was not gifted with a sense of humor? Such a man would be wrong not to give me a black ball, or whatever it is called—a negatory nod of his honest, respectable, stupid old head And I submit to his verdict without the slightest feeling of animosity against my judge Why, Dr. Johnson would certainly have black balled Fielding, whom he pronounced "a dull fellow—Sir, a dull fellow!" and why shouldn't my friend at the Athenæum? About getting in I don't care twopence, but indeed I am very much pleased to have had such sureties as Hallam and Milman, and to know that the gentlemen whom you mention were so generous in their efforts to serve me What does the rest matter? If you should ever know the old gentleman (for old I am sure he is, steady and respectable) who objects to me, give him my best compliments, and say I think he was quite right to exercise his judgment honestly, and to act according to that reason with which heaven has mercifully endowed him. But that he would be slow, I wouldn't in the least object to meet him, and he in his turn would think me flippant, etc Enough of these egotisms Didn't I tell you once before, that I feel frightened almost at the kindness of people regarding me? May we all be honest fellows, and keep our heads from too much vanity Your case was a very different one; yours was a stab with a sharp point, and the wound, I know, must have been a most severe one. So much the better in you to have borne it as you did I never heard in the least that your honor suffered by the injury done you, or that you lost the esteem (how should you?) of any single friend, because an enemy dealt you a savage blow The opponent in your case exercised a right to do a wrong, whereas, in the other, my Athenæum friend has done no earthly harm to any mortal, but has established his own character and got a great number of kind testimonials to mine

Always, dear Hayward, yours very truly

RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments by Rev J. B Gregg.

In the January Atlantic Mr George Frederic Parsons contributes a thoughtful article upon "The Saloon in Society." It opens with the following striking comparison

"The ancient Greeks had inherited the practice of infanticide from savage ancestors They became so inured to it that when the custom of exposing children gradually superseded child murder, there were not wanting moralists to deplore the change as denoting the rise of what moderns would call a 'sickly sentimentalism' The fate of exposed children, sad though it was, elicited no practical sympathy When a Greek mother thus abandoned her infant it was what her neighbors did It was social crime disguised by custom . . . If we are prepared to be candid with ourselves, it may not be difficult to show that even the barbarism of ancient Greece is not so far behind us as we should like to be able to feel that it is We do not kill our children. We do not any more expose them after the antique mode. We cherish them in their infancy, rear them to adolescence, and then send them forth to put their immature vitality against the most elaborate, skillfully devised, and comprehensive machinery for mincing human beings that the world has ever seen

We copy as of general interest the following note of the Andover trial from the Boston Advertiser

The trial of Professor Smyth, for alleged departure from the creed of Andover Theological Seminary, was begun at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning in the large dining room of the United States hotel At the outset the room was crowded, all the seats being taken and many people standing along the walls

The full board of visitors, the counsel on both sides, and the complainants and respondents were present. Although the spectators were largely clergymen, many laymen and a number of ladies were among the eager throngs who followed every step and watched every phase of the already famous contest.

On the platform sat the members of the board of visitors, before whom the case is being tried, and who have decided that they have original, as well as appellate, jurisdiction. On the right hand of President Seelye chairman of the board, sat Judge Marshall of Lowell, while Rev Dr. Eustis, the third member, occupied a place on the left. Judge F Rockwood Hoar and Judge French, the counsel for the complainants, sat around tables in front and at the left of the visitors Behind them were the complainants themselves, Dr. Dexter, Dr. Lamphear and Dr. Wellman. In front and at the right of the board sat the council for the respondents, Professor Theodore W. Dwight of the Columbia college law school, ex Governor Gaston, Hon. Charles Theodore Russell and Professor Simeon E Baldwin of the Yale college law school

Near them were grouped the accused professors, Dr E C Smyth, dean of Andover faculty, and Drs Harris, Tucker, Hincks and Churchill. Among the well known clergymen in the audience were Dr. Herrick, Dr. Withrow, Dr. Merriam, Rev Stacy Fowler, and Rev Newman Smyth, D D, of New Haven, Conn All the Boston daily papers were represented by reporters, and leading journals in New York and Chicago had correspondents and in some cases stenographers employed Nothing was lacking that could give to the opening day of this trial the impressiveness of a great and memorable occasion

The address of Professor Dwight occupied three and a half hours in delivery, was listened to throughout with the closest attention, and manifestly produced a deep effect upon the whole assembly It abounded in eloquent appeals, brilliant sarcasm and close linked reasoning Again and again his sharp and hard thrust points produced feelings in the audience which even the threat of expulsion from the room hardly sufficed to prevent from breaking into applause

The second day of the great trial opened at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning with a still greater audience than was present the day before There was some preliminary skirmishing, in the course of which the complainants stated that they were not prepared to proceed with the trial of any other of the accused professors, and wished to bring the case against Professor Smyth to a conclusion before taking up the others.

Professor Smyth then resumed the delivery of his address, which occupied altogether about four and one half hours It was the great feature of the day, commanding the closest attention from beginning to end of an audience which filled every inch of sitting, or standing room within hearing of the speaker. It was perfectly evident that the great majority of auditors, whether agreeing in doctrine with the accused or not were deeply impressed by his evident sincerity and christian earnestness, and were held under the spell of his eloquence, wit and logic. The threat made by the chairman of the board of visitors on the preceding day that further expression of approval [illegible] would result in clearing the house of spectators, sufficed to prevent any loud applause but again and again a thrill went through the great throng, which showed, perhaps, better than more pronounced demonstration could, have done how strongly the people were moved by a forensic effort which the general voice places among the masterpieces of recent times.

Professor Agassiz's daughter, Mrs. Quincy A Shaw, has done a magnificent work with characteristic Bostonian generosity The various kindergarten normal classes in Boston have just been closing their year's work, giving, as usual, exhibitions of the essential features of this system For nine years Mrs Quincy A Shaw has supported kindergartens in the city and vicinity, and has spent nearly $1,000,000 in this work At last, she has the satisfaction of knowing that she has demonstrated so completely the success of this method that the superintendent of the Boston public schools, Mr Seaver, has recommended its establishment in the primary schools Mrs Shaw deserves the earnest thanks of all students of education and all lovers of childhood She has helped to redeem children from the thraldom of a system of education which not only cast a gloom over their young lives, but stood in the way of a natural and healthy development of the youthful mind

MUSICAL (?) MUSINGS.

Although seven months have passed since I removed my music and sewing machine business to No 8 North Tejon street, so strong is the force of habit that customers still continue to call at my old store on Pike's Peak avenue for sewing machines, oil and needles, sheet music, etc

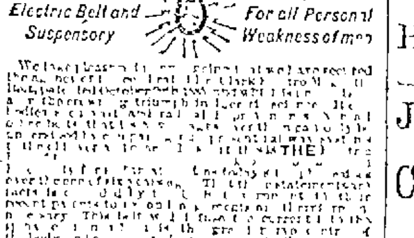

All goods pertaining to this department are now kept at the Tejon street store, where Mr Irving has charge I prefer to have all rents of pianos, organs, and sewing machines, and all payments on notes, leases, and time sales, paid to me at No 105 Pike's Peak avenue, as I keep these accounts there, but Mr Irving has charge of the tuning and repairing business

The news stand which has been kept in the music store I will remove and I intend, hereafter to occupy the entire room with my own goods, and to have it neat and attractive It seems to me that, with all the musical interest and talent that is developing in Colorado Springs, the city ought to support a pretty respectable music store, and I have made up my mind to keep as good a one as the citizens will allow me to—that is as good as their patronage will afford I think of engaging some young lady pianist who reads at sight, and can operate sewing machines to assist Mr Irving and take charge during his absence from the store It will not pay, for the present to carry a large stock of sheet music—but if everybody would intrust me with their sheet music orders, it would be quite a help A lady for whom I once offered to order a sheet of music, replied, "Oh! I can do that myself" Of course it does not require a very profound intellect to order a sheet of music, but that isn't the point. Being in the business, I am enabled to buy all music at such a discount that I can retail as low as the publishers do and still make a profit If I can get your music for you as quickly and deliver it here as cheap as you can get elsewhere, will you not be willing to allow me the retailer's profit rather than pay it to a dealer in some other city If you have any personal grudge against me can you not lay it aside for the sake of benefiting a home institution? Very respectfully,

To carry out this end they recommend that the council appoint a commission to investigate the best methods and report for their subsequent action."

Dr Solly followed this up with some very interesting and valuable remarks upon the ..., after which it was referred to the committee on sewerage and drainage.

Agrees with Randolph

LONDON, January 11. Gladstone writes saying that Lord Randolph Churchill's resignation was justifiable, and adds: "I myself favor more economy in army and navy expenditures."

CALLED BACK

A ... the ... at the Opera House Last Evening

Mr Joseph J Grismer and Miss Phoebe Davies ... presented the dramatization of Hugh Conway's Called Back before an ... audience at the opera house last evening. As regards the dramatization we can ... say that it ... the original story as ... told by the ... who have seen it to ... in which Mr Robert B Mantel achieved noteworthy success. Mr Grismer has certainly displayed rare ability in making this ... Conway's ... work.

A very unfortunate but inadvertent mistake occurred in printing of the program. The part of Macari was given to Mr Grismer which ... taken by Mr Elmer Davenport and the part of Gilbert Vaughan ... given to Mr Davenport which ... taken by Mr Grismer. No doubt ... the audience ... that Mr Grismer was acting ... the ... part. Of his ... we can truly say that ... He has drawn ... very sharply ... acting and ... the ... part gives many opportunities for the actor who assumes it to over act it yet Mr Grismer ... throughout maintained an evenness which was quite refreshing.

Miss Phoebe Davies as Pauline March was a favorite with her audience from the start. Add... to her personal charms is a simplicity of manner and an unaffectedness of expression which lends to her acting an additional charm. The finale of the third act in which the real ... of the play occurred was a fine exhibition of emotional acting in which Miss Davies and Mr Grismer appeared to favorable advantage. The audience evidently appreciated their efforts for at the close of the act they were granted an enthusiastic recall.

Mr Elmer Davenport as Macari and Mr W... Deal as Dr Ceneri certainly deserve favorable mention. Their ... of the Italian accent and expression was very clever and ... never lost during the presentation of the play. Mr Davenport's Macari is evidently the fruit of much painstaking study and his performance in it is highly creditable. Mr Deal's Ceneri, while a very difficult role to assume yet he has surmounted the difficulties and in his hands it is a finished piece of acting. The passage between Mr Grismer and him in the fourth act was intensely dramatic and fully deserved the hearty applause which it received.

Mr Harry Davenport as Dr D... Mrs Sara Stevens as Priscilla and Miss Loyola O'Connor as ... added greatly to the effective presentation of the play by the satisfactory manner in which they rendered their respective roles.

The company is as evenly balanced an organization as has ever appeared in our opera house. The stage settings were very tasteful and complete—that in the fourth act being particularly realistic. We are sorry that Mr Grismer and his company were not greeted by a larger audience, which they certainly merited and deserved. We trust that we shall receive another visit from them next season when the enviable reputation which they established last evening before a portion of our theatre goers will insure them a much larger and enthusiastic audience.

Davitt Interviewed.

CORK, January 10. Michael Davitt, the Irish agitator, accompanied by his California bride, arrived here to-day. Mr Davitt was asked if he had seen Gladstone's telegram to a liberal meeting on Saturday, in which he says: "I think affairs are all moving in the right direction."

"Yes, and Gladstone has good cause to say that the difficulties in the way of Lord Salisbury's administration have brought about a demoralizing condition of affairs in his own cabinet, resulting in the resignation of Randolph Churchill, in the resignation of Lord Iddesleigh and Lord Cross, a second the fulfilment in the condition of things in Ireland of Mr Gladstone's prophetic declaration made eight or ten months ago that Ireland could not possibly be governed except under a home rule constitution. This is naturally encouraging to the ex-premier. He sees clearly that things are moving in accord with that prediction and, therefore, he has good ground for assuring his friends that affairs are all moving in the right direction. Affairs in Ireland and England to-day indicate that the tory government will completely collapse in a short time, when the liberal party will be restored to office."

"What do see in the horizon that is ... going to yourself?"

"A great deal. The impending collapse of the tory government is gratifying. The breaking down of the tory party I have predicted in ... addresses I have delivered in the United States during the past four months. I ... the Irish people showing a splendid fighting spirit, and at the same time exhibiting great self restraint under ... the ... proceedings against Dillon, O'Brien and ... the fight against unjust rentals being most vigorously sustained. The people notwithstanding the vigorous law proceedings of the landlords and the frequent resort to eviction, have thus far committed no serious outrage whatever. The difficulty now confronting the tory government is ... compelled to defend in the action of Irish landlords what individual tories and many members of Lord Salisbury's administration have themselves condemned by their conduct ... to their own tenants in England and Scotland."

A Great Windfall

... City, Wis., January 10. Alex Crawford, a well known Duluth iron manufacturer, has received notice that by the death of a ... uncle named James Thompson, in Ballarat, Australia, a fortune of over one million ... has been left to him and his ... giving them nearly $100,000. Crawford has not seen his ... for forty years.

Salisbury's Cabinet

LONDON, January 10. The composition of the new cabinet was announced this evening: Lord Salisbury secretary of state for foreign affairs, ... Right Hon W H Smith first lord of the treasury, Right Hon G I Goschen chancellor of the exchequer, Right Hon Edward Stanhope, secretary of state for war, and Sir Henry Holland, secretary of state for colonies.

PAINTS & WALL PAPER.

Our New Styles of WALL PAPER have been arriving for the last month and we would say that our stock is the largest and best that can be seen in this city. We do not hesitate in saying that if any one is in need of Wall Paper and will give us a call but what we can please them in Styles and Prices however fastidious they may be and as we do not employ any but first-class tradesmen you can depend upon it that your work will be done so that you won't have to be doing it over every six months. You will then see that it don't pay you to employ those who resort to Painting and Paper Hanging whenever every other device has failed them for a living. Or should you listen to the recommendations of those who talk them up for they will only do so when there is money in it for themselves. Paints, Oils, Lead, Brushes, Varnishes, Glass and Window Shades.

We have also on sale for a few days some of those English Gems of Art, which will be sold very cheap.
